

ENGL 113R: Public Speaking

This course will provide a forum for students to practice and develop effective communication skills for the purpose of addressing diverse audiences with confidence and competence. Using a variety of instructional strategies students will learn to research, outline, and deliver speeches appropriate for the setting and population. Students will study speech fundamentals and delivery strategies and learn to adapt purpose and message based on audience analysis. Special attention will be given to critical listening skills and ethical considerations.

Credits: 3

Lecture Hours: 3

Prerequisites:

ENGL 102R

(or corequisite)

Program: English