

ENGL 102R: College Composition

In this course, students learn to write clearly and effectively for defined audiences through a variety of writing strategies, behaviors, habits, and attitudes. Emphasis is on the writing process from prewriting through drafting, revising, and editing. Students gain confidence through learning basic writing principles of effective expository composition and the application of these principles in writing essays and documented papers. Resources for this class may include texts, Library and electronic resources, and personal experiences.

Course Corequisite Description

In the corequisite workshop, student will receive individualized, assignment-based support, and targeted, review-based instruction. The co-requisite is designed to serve as a reinforcement of the College Composition curriculum.

Please note that workshop attendance is mandatory for all students who are registered for the co-requisite. These students must attend at least 80% of the co-requisite workshops in order to successfully complete ENGL 102R.
